Since his origins in Chicago's radical 60s collectives, the output of the saxophonist and composer has moved way beyond jazz boundaries to a complex interplay of sound and abstract thought. Brian Morton goes head to head with the grandmaster to try to unravel his life's work, and hears how Braxton's current music is informed by a panoramic view of ancient history and an apocalyptic future vision, in: The Wire, #252 (Feb.2005), p. 28-35 (F/I)
