Phil Freeman: Faith healer. Half a century after he boldly predicted the shape of jazz to come, and now in his 80th year, master musician Ornette Coleman is once more entering a phase of high activity, as curator of London's Meltdown Festival and running his current group with son Denardo. Here he dispenses his egalitarian philosophy of universal language and sound grammar, the logic behind his stop-start work rate, and his belief that music is a healing force, in: The Wire, #304 (Jun.2009), p. 47 (F/I)
