Keith Shadwick: John Coltrane. It Never Ends. It's been a remarkable few months for fans of John Coltrane as news filtered through of previously unheard and unreleased recordings were at last about to be issued. The first of these was recorded at Carnegie Hall with Thelonious Monk in 1957 while the second was taped in the more intimate environment of the Half Note club in 1965. Keith Shadwick talks to Trane's son Ravi, who discovered the Half Note tapes, about his reactions to these additions to his father's recorded legacy and wonders if there's anything left in the vaults that may still surprise us, in: Jazzwise, #91 (Oct.2005), p. 34-37 (F/I with Ravi Coltrane)
