Stuart Nicholson: Down But Not Out in Paris and London. Towards the end of last year and without much notice Keith Jarrett announced that he would perform two solo concerts in Paris and London. They were very special appearances charged with heightened emotion and both were recorded and have now been released less than a year on, in a special three-CD package. What audiences in France and England had no means of knowing at the time was that Jarrett was going through a personal crisis in his life and these concerts took place amid considerable turmoil for the reat oianist following the break-up of his marriage. They also came less than 18 months after the huge controversy that surrounded his outburst at a concert at the Umbria Jazz Festival in Italy which caused considerable offence at the time.
